Dear Friend of the Vietnam Women’s Memorial

The Department of Defense kicked off its 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War Commemoration at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Memorial Day, 2012. The office of commemoration is working closely with the Vietnam Women’s Memorial Foundation to support our 20th Anniversary Commemoration of the Dedication of the Vietnam Women’s Memorial on Veteran’s Day 2013. I hope you can join us that day!

This year we fielded a record number of requests asking about women’s service during the Vietnam era. As our younger generations witness the increasing need for women to keep our military strong they look for research, lessons learned, historically accurate material, and oral histories. The efforts of the Vietnam Women’s Memorial Foundation (VWMF) have transformed conversations and images of women’s service of the Vietnam war, affirming that women share the crucible of war.

We are grateful to you for standing with these heroic women, helping to assure their legacy is remembered. We give special thanks to the estates of Elizabeth Wilson and Alice Dyer for generous bequests endowing the VWMF. These gifts provide support for our ongoing education and service mission to include the collection and archiving of oral histories at the Library of Congress.

And again, we give you our special thanks for continuing to donate what you can.

50th Anniversary Commemoration of the War Kicks off Memorial Day

On a blistering hot day, Memorial Day Ceremonies at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial marked the first event of many to Commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War. The commemorative program, sponsored by the Department of Defense and authorized by Congress honors veterans and their families, recognizes contributions and sacrifices on the home front, and provides Americans with an understanding and history of the Vietnam War.

President Barack Obama addressed the audience: “[We] come to this wall—to this sacred place—to remember. We can step towards its granite wall and reach out, touch a name. Today is Memorial Day, when we recall all those who gave everything in the darkness of war so we could stand here in the glory of spring. We honor each of those names etched in stone--58,282 American patriots. We salute all who served with them. And we stand with the families who love them still...

And so a central part of this 50th anniversary will be to tell your story as it should have been told all along. It’s another chance to set the record straight. That’s one more way we keep perfecting our Union -- setting the record straight. And it starts today. Because history will honor your service, and your names will join a story of service that stretches back two centuries.

Let us tell the story of a generation of servicemembers - - every color, every creed, rich, poor, officer and enlisted -- who served with just as much patriotism and honor as any before you. Let’s never forget that most of those who served in Vietnam did so by choice. So many of you volunteered. Your country was at war, and you said, “send me.” That includes our women in Vietnam -- every one of you a volunteer. Those who were drafted, they, too, went and carried their burden-you served; you did your duty...

Today, we’re calling on all Americans, and every segment of our society, to join this effort. Everybody can do something. Five decades removed from a time of division among Americans, this anniversary can remind us of what we share as Americans. That includes honoring our Vietnam veterans by never forgetting the lessons of that war.”

Tropical Paradise in Vietnam

Colonel Sharon Bystran, USA, Ret., began her speech at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Veterans Day, 2011, reflecting back 46 years...”It is hard for me to believe that I saw the distant shores of Qui Nhon, Vietnam and thought; wow it looks like a tropical paradise. The vision quickly vanished as I landed on shore with doctors, nurses, medics and other hospital personnel to establish the 500 bed 85th Evacuation Hospital. We arrived with great anticipation and expectation, but with little knowledge of how to set up a field hospital.

As tents were set up and supply boxes opened we began to realize that we were assembling a World War II vintage hospital. The lack of modern equipment and supplies was a shock. We were soon to find out what challenges heat, humidity, monsoon rains, old equipment, and inadequate supplies would bring.

In the early weeks, the hospital had several small surges of 5 to 15 casualties that were treated in a reasonably efficient manner. Then, in early November the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry’s venture into the Ia Drang Valley and battle with the North Vietnamese Regular Army brought the true realities of war home to us. Suddenly we were inundated with casualties. Surgery went around the clock -64 surgeries were done in the first 24 hours and it continued on for several days.

During that year we admitted more than 14,000 casualties. On our worst day 106 wounded were admitted during a two-hour period.

It was how we pulled together as a team, the camaraderie when we saw what we could accomplish under the worst of circumstances and still provide quality care to the many wounded that arrived at our door. You can only understand the bond among those who have successfully served together in a war, if you have been there. There is no greater bond.”

Hundreds of women gathered on Capitol Hill, March 13, 2012, to induct into the Army Women’s Hall of Fame all those who served in Vietnam. The afternoon event was hosted by the U.S. Army Women’s Foundation, and followed a morning event, the 4th Annual Army Women in Transition Symposium, where former military leaders and civilians discussed the changing roles of women serving in the Army and the challenges faced by female soldiers after they leave the Army -- finding employment after the Army, for instance. In the afternoon, retired Maj. Gen. Dee Ann McWilliams, who now serves as president of the foundation, discussed the challenges faced by women who had served in Vietnam. “The women who served in Vietnam did it for their country -- in terrible conditions,” she said. Those women, she said, dealt with adversity, and the nurses there dealt “with things they could not ever have been trained for; the trauma, the shock, the tropical diseases, compounded all the things that happened.” When those women officers and enlisted came home, she said, Americans didn’t notice the work they had done. “They didn’t even make a ripple at home. We want to change that today, and do our part.”

More than a dozen women took the stage at the event representing all Vietnam Veterans. All had served in Vietnam in the limited roles for women at the time.

VWMF Gratefully Acknowledges Dedicated Volunteers

Every Memorial Day and Veteran’s Day, rain or shine, in heat or cold, two women drive from Pennsylvania to work all day at the Vietnam Women’s Memorial handing out booklets and inviting visitors to listen to Storytelling. These two dedicated volunteers are U.S. Navy Commander (Retired) Anne Devney, a Vietnam era veteran, and her friend Rebecca (Becky) Daugherty. When Anne attended the Memorial’s dedication in 1993, she wondered how many of those celebrating Veteran’s Day had been her patients. Although she was not recognized by any attendees, it was a time to remember her colleagues and patients. For Becky, who suffers from a serious chronic illness, the Memorial inspires women who did not serve in Vietnam to realize that there is hope and healing after difficult and unspeakable events in their own lives. We are grateful to have these dedicated volunteers and hope you will come meet them at our 20th Anniversary celebration if not before.

A Legacy of Healing and Hope
Memorial Dedicated to First Woman to Die in Vietnam

On Saturday, June 16, 2012, the 2LT Carol Ann Drazba RN, US Army Nurse Corps Memorial was dedicated in Scranton, PA. Lieutenant Drazba was the first American military woman to die in the Vietnam War (February 1966). She and two friends, I LT Elizabeth Jones and CPT (Dr.) Thomas Stasko, all stationed at the 3rd Field Hospital in Saigon, had left for a hard-earned short R&R at Dalat when their helicopter crashed after it became entangled in high tension wires. All aboard, including four members of the flight crew, were lost. Their names are on Panel 05E, Line 046 of the Vietnam Memorial in Washington DC.

The memorial consists of a statue of Carol Ann Drazba in the uniform of her Scranton State General Hospital School of Nursing, including cap and cape, and was unveiled by her surviving brother and sister with 22 family members also attending. Behind the statue is a low wall of black granite, echoing the Vietnam Memorial, and it is flanked by two black benches commemorating local residents who gave their lives in Vietnam. The spot is well shaded and placed in front of the Gino Merli Veterans Center in downtown Scranton - once site of the Scranton State General Hospital. The honored guest speaker was BG Wilma Vaught, (USAF, Ret) President of WIMSA, and the keynote speaker was MG Jimmie O. Keenan, Chief, Army Nurse Corps. Two members of the VVWMF Board of Directors, Ms. Edie Meeks, RN, and LTC Sharon Stanley-Alden, (USA, Ret) represented the Foundation and presented a memorial wreath.

To the hundreds of veterans and family members in attendance, Carol Ann Drazba remains a hero and inspiration to selfless service. Her spirit remains very much alive in that special place.

A Vietnam Veteran’s Return to Active Duty

I had the privilege of serving 27 years in the Army Nurse Corps (ANC), from 1966-1993 (with a break in service), including tours around the US, a year in Vietnam, the Gulf War and a final eight years at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. After I retired, I moved on to the civilian world with several terrific jobs over the next fifteen years. I thought things were going along swimmingly!

In summer 2008 I received an email from the ANC asking if I was interested in returning to Active Duty for a few years as a Nurse Case Manager (NCM). Well, I had never served in that role - clinically, I was in critical or emergency care - but it only took a nanosecond or two to send back my reply: YES! Even better, I was given the opportunity to serve in Germany, where my older son and his family were stationed at the time. Within two months, I packed up household goods and felines, and off we flew to our new home: Bamburg and the Warrior Transition Unit (WTU); more specifically, 2nd Plt., C Co., Warrior Transition Battalion-Europe.

Both the job and the environment were wonderful, providing ample opportunities for helping Wounded Warriors recuperate and for personal travel around Europe.

WTU NCMs coordinate all aspects of patient care for recovering servicemen and women, whether ill or injured, when complex recovery or rehabilitation involving multiple medical services will take more than about six months and precludes performance of regular duties. Soldiers are formally assigned to a WTU, where their only job is preparation for either return to duty or for transition to civilian life as a contributing Veteran and citizen after medical separation. The 3+ years I spent in that capacity were among the most challenging, interesting and rewarding I spent in the ANC, and the perfect coda to a wonderful career.

Enhanced Efforts by VA to help Women

The Veterans Administration has rolled out enhanced services especially for women wrestling with serious PTSD, traumatic brain injury, substance abuse, depression or sexual trauma (MST). More and more VA facilities have established dedicated facilities for the care of women. To receive services for MST, veterans do not need a VA service-connected disability rating. For information, ask your local VA clinician or contact the VA’s general information hotline at 1-800-827-1000.

A Legacy Of Healing And Hope

The Vietnam Women’s Memorial Foundation maintains an active program educating the public about the roles women played during the Vietnam era. We respond to many dozens of queries each year to provide information, find resources to support local programs, and assist students at every level of education. Using our Sister Search database we assist historians and researchers wishing to conduct studies that offer outcomes that would assist Vietnam veterans as well as the veterans of today’s Global War on Terrorism. We reach out to today’s veterans to mentor and promote healing. Our “Storytelling at the Vietnam Women’s Memorial: In Their Own Words” is a day-long program at the Memorial every Memorial Day and Veterans Day. During this day a variety of speakers offer their insights related to their experiences, memories and hopes for the future. Contact the VWMF if you are interested in presenting. Join us every Memorial Day and Veterans Day at the Vietnam Women’s Memorial.

Seeking Stories of Disabled Veterans

Gail Prensky is looking for personal stories to include in developing a book and film project about disabled veterans after they return home from war, and how our country has responded to them.

Gail is looking for personal accounts—copies of letters, diaries, written essays, and visual material—by disabled veterans and their family and friends. She would like to share their experience in dealing with the effects of war and their disability after returning from WWI, WWII, Korea, Vietnam, Persian Gulf War, Iraq and Afghanistan.
